

BLR

SIBW

18, February 2023

Climate change

In climate change there's numerous organizations, government aid programs, companies and numerous that will help to reduce and fight climate change. EPA is one both capable as well as outstanding to work within local governments, communities and tribes. EPA is very hard working when it comes to getting the clean air that people need as well as achieving clean drinking water that all governments and local communities need. Also I think being more environmentally encouraging and making it more affirmative to people is very important. What I think we can do in our local communities is talk about it but make it so people will listen and understand the ways that we as people can change our ways to help our environment and life. I would say that it would affect the native american tribes that were here and that took care of the earth as if the environment it self was their own children. I know a huge mass of native tribes had their own ways to take care of the earth and everything around them. But some native american tribes that I wanted to talk about they have peaked my interest are the Atsugewi tribe, Lakota tribe and Wintun tribe.